STRANGER IN TOWN

"HOOK" Mason slammed the door of the sheriff's office and slammed his fist down on Bill Embler's desk. "I thought I told you to lay off'n my men, sheriff!"

The white haired old man looked at the scowling face of the town boss and trembled inwardly. "Now see here, Hook . . ." he began.

"Shut up! Yore deputy just tried to close my gambling rooms and caught a slug in the shoulder. Maybe that'll teach yuh to keep yore nose outa my business. I'm runnin' this town whether you're sheriff or not, and you'd better do as I say, understand?"

Hook didn't wait for a reply. He hitched his two guns up a little higher and strode out of the office, slamming the door behind him. For a long moment Bill sat there, fingering his star, realizing that it was worth nothing in this town.

The voice that spoke from behind him was low and calm, with a flavor of the southern part of the state. It said, "Trouble, sheriff?"

Bill turned his head. The cowpuncher was tall and lean, dressed in nondescript trail-riding togs. He leaned against the back door, rolling a smoke. Although Bill knew him to be a stranger, his face was vaguely familiar. He said, "Yeah, plenty trouble." The cowboy waited, and the sheriff, glad to speak, continued, "In one week I've lost three good deputies. I might as well resign."

"Things can't be that bad," the cowboy grinned.

"They are though. That was Hook Mason. When the railroads went through this town, he moved in with his gun-slingers and took the place over. Cowboys come to town, lose their stakes . . . Hook makes the storekeepers pay him or get burnt out . . . oh, it's plenty rough! The worst part is that I'm so old I can't do anythin' about it."

"What you need is a good deputy."

"Sure, but who wants to work where they're sure to get shot?"

"I'll take the job, sheriff." Bill looked at him, amazed. There was something about this stranger that defied recognition, but Bill didn't worry about that. He pinned a badge on him and swore him in at once. The stranger grinned when Bill asked his name, and said, "Just call me Joe, sheriff. That's enough for now."

Artie Masters was collecting the weekly toll from Bert Nelson of the general store when Joe walked in. Artie saw the badge and laughed in derision. The next moment he was flat on his back, wiping the blood from his smashed nose. In a minute Joe emptied his pockets, took out the day's receipts and handed them to Bert, telling him to give it back to the men Artie collected from. The startled storekeeper had no choice but to obey. Artie got up, threatening dire results, and found himself thrown out on the street. Joe said softly, "You tell Hook that I'll see him tonight . . . if he's still around by then!"

Utah Jones was big and tough. He had to be. He sat on the hitchrail outside the stock pens beside the railroad and made the punchers that drove steers in for shipment pay off at so much a head. Joe rode his mare up to where he lolled, and dismounted. Utah barely threw him a glance until Joe said, "Clear outa here, bucky, and keep on goin'!"

One short laugh was all that Utah let out before he saw the peculiar stance of the deputy. It was a gunfighter's stance, ready for a quick draw. Utah spat out a word and reached for his gun. Joe let him get it clear, then blasted it out of his hand with the first shot. A hundred pairs of eyes were on the scene, but nobody dared interfere.

"You goin' to leave town, Utah . . . or do you get carried out?" There was no mistaking the threat in the words. Utah Jones nodded dumbly and ran for his horse. He was lost in a cloud of dust when Joe holstered his gun.

Hook Mason knew what was going on. His men carried the story of the proceedings to him as soon as they happened. Immediately Hook called a pair of his best gun slicks over and gave them the job of collecting and taking over the stock pens. Neither one of them wanted the job. The stories of this new deputy were getting better every time they were told, and he was too fast for them. They looked at each other in mutual agreement and told Hook so-long right there.

For two years the town had been under the guns of Hook's outfit. The people paid off and kept quiet, otherwise they were burned out. A few who tried to protest were up on Boot Hill right now. So there were a lot of grinning faces the night Joe passed the word for everybody in town to be at Hook's gambling casino. This was something they wouldn't miss for the world!

At eight o'clock Hook noticed the crowd coming in. They sat at the faro tables or played chuck-a-luck, but they weren't spending much money. Hook was nervous. The crowd was in a mood that he hadn't seen before. He called Spade Trevor to his side and told him to stay there. Of all the gunmen in the southwest, Spade was one of the fastest.

A little after nine, Sheriff Bill Embler walked into the casino. He nodded to some of the people he knew, then took a chair by the door. Joe came in right after him, hands hanging loosely, said hello to the sheriff, then looked around for Hook.

The crowd got it then. They raced for the sides of the room and flattened against the walls. Hook and Spade faced the new deputy waiting to see what would happen. Hook Mason was trembling visibly, but his hired gun-hand was as calm as Joe. Spade didn't scare easily. He was fast with a gun and knew it.

Joe said, "I'm closing your place up, Hook. Any objections?" The big man swallowed hard; his lips tightened, then his eyes lit up in a strange manner. For a second his mouth fell slack and he tried to raise his hands in the air. Something had frightened Hook dead white.

Spade didn't wait for his boss to answer. He sneered, "Just try it and you'll go keep the other deputies company!"

"I'm doin' it," Joe told him. Spade's hand was a blur of speed as he reached for his gun, but as fast as he was, Joe's shot took him in the shoulder and spun him around. Then the gun swung on Hook. "I'll give you two minutes, Hook. Get goin'!" Hook was out and riding for the border in much less time.

It was quite a while before the crowd stopped cheering and Bill had his new deputy alone in his office. They sat facing each other and Bill said, "I couldn't figure you at first, Joe . . . until I saw Hook work up a lather when he recognized you. You know, a drifter just doesn't come into the sheriff's office, grab a star and wipe out one of the most notorious outfits that ever rustled a steer. You got that look about you . . . I guess every one of those crooks you braced saw it. The sight of you scared Hook stiff. I went through all my old files and came up with this." Bill tapped a "Wanted" poster, whose picture bore a remarkable likeness to his deputy. "Texas Joe, wanted for this, that and the next thing . . . so that's you. Why, Joe?"

The cowboy grew tense. "For the first time in my life I saw a chance where a guy like me would do some good. I took it; now you got me. Sheriff, I'm trying to go straight . . . do you think it could be done?"

Bill grinned. Slowly his hands tore the poster into small pieces. "You got a lot of friends around here now who could never hear of your past. Think you'd like to stick as my deputy? It isn't often that the country's fastest gunman changes sides . . . but maybe it's for the best!"

Joe was all smiles. "I'd like it fine, sheriff," he said. They shook on it.

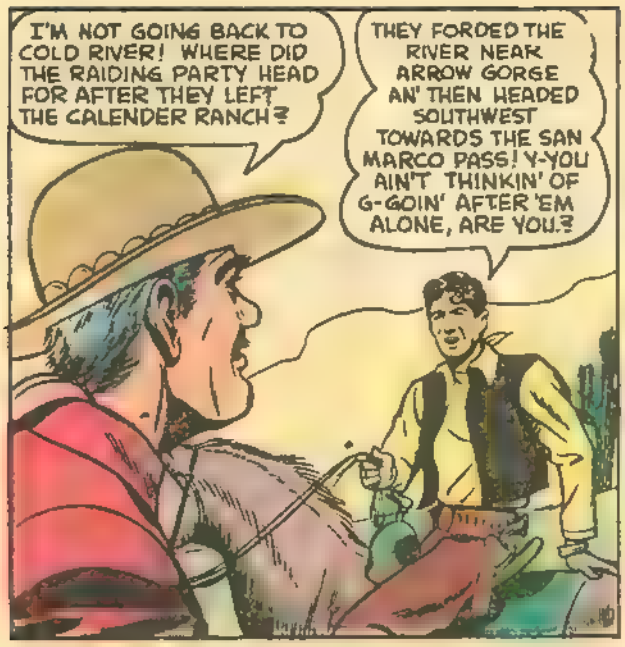
K-KIDNAPPED ELLEN? N-NO; IT CAN'T BE TRUE! THERE MUST BE SOME MISTAKE!
IT AIN'T NO MISTAKE, CRANDALL! SHE WAS STAYIN' OVER AT MONTY CALENDER'S SPREAD WHEN THE INJUNS CAME! THEY LEFT THE TWO CALENDER GALS BEHIND!
ELLEN! MY P-POOR LITTLE ELLEN! THE BLOOD THIRSTY HEATHENS FIGURE THEY CAN TAKE REVENGE ON ME BY KILLING HER!
AIN'T YOU COMIN', CRANDALL?
IF I LEAVE KID COLT'S TRAIL, I'LL BE BREAKING MY SOLEMN OATH AS A U.S. MARSHAL! IF I STICK TO THE TRAIL, MY DAUGHTER DIES! WHICH IS MORE IMPORTANT, THE LIFE OF MY DAUGHTER OR THE LAW!



I'M NOT GOING BACK TO COLD RIVER! WHERE DID THE RAIDING PARTY HEAD FOR AFTER THEY LEFT THE CALENDER RANCH?
THEY FORDED THE RIVER NEAR ARROW GORGE AN' THEN HEADED SOUTHWEST TOWARDS THE SAN MARCO PASS! Y-YOU AIN'T THINKIN' OF G-GOIN' AFTER 'EM ALONE, ARE YOU?

LOSE UGLY FAT OR NO CHARGE

BLACKHEADS "PET HATE"

Say Men, Girls in Choosing Date

What a "black mark" is the blackhead . . . according to men and girls popular enough to be choosy about dates!

"Nobody's dreamboat!" "Nobody's date bait!" And that's not all that's said of those who are careless about blackheads. But blackheads ARE ugly! Blackheads ARE grimy! And they DON'T look good in close-ups!

So can you blame the fellow who says, "Sure, I meet lots of girls who look cute at first glance. But if, on that second glance, I see dingy blackheads, it's good night!"

Or can you blame the girl who confesses, "I hate to go out with a fellow who has blackheads. If he's careless about that you're sure he'll embarrass you in other ways, too!"

But you—are YOUR ears burning? Well, you've company and, sad to say, good company. There are lots of otherwise attractive fellows and girls who could date anyone they like if they'd only realize how offensive blackheads are . . . and how easily and quickly they could get rid of them . . . if they want to!

"He-Man" Often Guilty of Blackhead Crime

Take your "he-man" . . . super at track, games, sports of all kinds . . . who thinks that after just a shower he's ready to go anywhere! And won't the girls all admire his muscles!

Sure they would! But not many dance floors are set up for hurdle races! You can't show off your snappy left hook when only cokes are in the ring. The "he-man" who's also clean-cut, will get the breaks wherever he is.

Even Cute Girls Become Careless

Easy, too easy, for a girl to think that if she has the latest in clothes and hair-do she needn't bother about blackheads. A little more make-up, she guesses, will take care of that. BUT MAKE-UP WON'T HIDE BLACKHEADS! Not unless it's plaster of paris, maybe! And even good make-up "slips" at a dance! So don't take chances, cute though you may be!

TAKE THESE TIPS TO BANISH BLACKHEADS

Keep skin clean by washing morning and night with warm, almost hot, water. Use good soap and plenty of it. And finish with cool water.

Extract every blackhead as soon as you see it—with a SAFE extractor. Don't use finger nails. Don't squeeze. That may mean infection, injured tissues, a marred skin.

Just be clean! Be quick! And be safe! That's easy! And that's ALL!
